Is Your Oral Health Putting Your Overall Health at Risk?

- About 40 percent of American adults experience a form of moderate to severe periodontal (gum) disease.
- Gum disease is caused by bacteria that form plaque on your teeth.
- Left untreated, these bacteria can severely infect the gums and lead to tooth loss.
- And, researchers have associated gum disease with many different health problems, including diabetes, heart disease, stroke and more.

How To Help Prevent Gum Disease

- Brush your teeth gently for two minutes twice a day with a soft-bristled brush.
- Make sure you brush not only your teeth, but along and just below your gum line.
- Floss at least once daily to clean between your teeth.
- If you smoke, find a program to help you quit for good.
- See your dentist regularly for checkups and preventive care.
